Ever evolving, the Androgyne Collection is now introduced in a new lower, wider size with same table tops and base materials as the other Androgyne Side Table. A celebration of material and craft, the Androgyne Collection embodies the perfect balance between masculine and feminine elements.

Designed for Audo by the Copenhagen-based Norwegian architect and designer Danielle Siggerud, the simple silhouettes and refined materials allow for effortless mixing and matching to achieve the desired expression. The new size exemplifies this blend of contrasts. The base comes in three metal finishes: ivory powder-coated metal, black powder-coated metal and brushed steel, while the table tops are available in Emperador, Calacatta Viola, Nero Marquina and Crystal Rose marble that feature distinctive colours and veining. The round top cleverly overhangs the corresponding base, creating a striking visual effect that balances solid and soft lines. Ideal also for use as a lounge table, either alone or in combination with other pieces from the collection, both the base and table top are sold separately, allowing for complete customisation to individual preferences. The Androgyne Collection comprises lounge, dining and side tables in a range of sizes and beautiful natural materials including wood, marble and stone.

About the Designer

Danielle Siggerud, a Norwegian architect based in Copenhagen, obtained her master's degree in architecture from the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Denmark. Founding her studio in 2016, her practice now operates globally, undertaking projects spanning from London and New York to Stockholm and Paris. Her portfolio encompasses private renovations, restorations and contemporary buildings to interior design, furniture making and smaller objects. Central to Siggerud's work is a keen eye for space and materials, evident in her sensitive and contextual approach. She embraces the essence of built forms, meticulously attending to details from the roughest construction to the smallest interior elements. At the heart of her design ethos lies a commitment to simplicity, achieved through a delicate balance of architectural fundamentals: space, proportion, light and materials. On her approach, Siggerud emphasises that these qualities are not merely sought for their intrinsic value, but as tools to enhance the human experience.
